Lecture: Transnational Law II – Constitutional Issues

Subject

According to a traditional understanding, law is made by or between states. Under conditions of globalisation, however, the state-centred paradigm of law reaches its limits. Individual states can hardly regulate cross-border affairs effectively, while there is often no consensus or time for international law-making. World society therefore brings about novel forms of ordering and dispute resolution. Examples can be found in many issue-areas including commerce and sports, the internet and the environment. The lecture approaches this transformation of law from different perspectives. From an empirical perspective, it explores the emergence and functioning of the phenomena. From an analytical perspective, it determines their legal status with regard to the conventional distinctions between national and international as well as public and private law. From a normative perspective, it addresses the question of legitimacy. Finally, from a doctrinal perspective, it develops constitutional standards within positive law.

Organisation

The lecture is held on Tuesdays from 4 to 6 p.m. at Forum am Domshof, room 20009. All information and materials are available on Stud.IP.

Credit

The lecture is offered as a compulsory course for the master programme in “Transnational Law”. Students from the field of specialisation may choose it as an elective course. 6 ECTS can be obtained.
