Declaration of Originality

I hereby declare that I participated in the above-named examination independently, without any outside help, and without the use of prohibited aids. I am aware that the help of a third party, joint work on examination tasks with others in one room, or with the help of social media is considered prohibited outside help. I am also aware that the unmarked adoption and use of contents from the internet is considered prohibited outside help.

Important note:

The university is holding online examinations in order to give students the chance to take examinations and acquire credit points under the current pandemic restrictions and without any risk to health. The university is depending on the correct behavior of examination participants and must have confidence that no attempted cheating will take place. That is why any violation of procedure that occurs in contradiction to the Declaration of Originality will generally be considered a severe case of deception in accordance with §18 of the General Part of Bachelor's and Master's Examination Regulations and according to §42 sub para. 4 BremHG. As a rule, students who attempt deception repeatedly or particularly severely will be withdrawn from their studies. Copyright Notice: The teaching materials and examination tasks (questions/example answers) are copyright protected. Every case of usage outside of the specific teaching and examination scenarios (e.g. uploading to platforms, publication in scripts, passing on to other students or third parties – in print, digitally, or orally) is prohibited and punishable by law. Furthermore, such behavior may lead to claims for injunctive relief and damages.
