

Apply for the Summer Schools of 2024!

During the summer months, the University of Groningen offers a variety of research-driven, interdisciplinary and international summer schools that are an amazing opportunity for you to build upon your academic career. The summer schools are intensive, weeklong programmes that are the perfect way to build upon your knowledge on relevant topics in your field, meet and create new connections with peers and experts from across the globe and share your ideas and research.

Given that many of the summer schools are interdisciplinary, participants can gain new insight on the topics that are of interest to them from various disciplinary perspectives. Furthermore, the summer schools often welcome participants of various levels of education ranging from third year bachelors students to practitioners that are coming from all over the world. Not only is this a great networking opportunity but it is also a chance to gain a well-rounded perspective on the issues at hand by learning about the experiences of peers from different backgrounds and even get inspiration for your own research.

During the summer school programme, you will follow lectures taught by leading experts in the field but depending on the summer school, may also take part in workshops, group work and sometimes work on assignments, projects or work on solutions to real-life challenges. As the summer schools are research-driven, you often have the opportunity to share their research and get feedback on it. There are also many fun social activities and networking opportunities to take part in including a city tour or scavenger hunt, welcoming drinks as well as school-specific activities such as excursions, events and dinners. What a great way to spend a week of your summer!
