

Network against Discrimination

The Network against Discrimination goes back to a resolution taken by the Bremen Senate in 2012.

The aims of the Network are

- sensitisation to different forms of discrimination and multiple discrimination
- providing information about possible actions
- discussion in conferences, information brochures including current new frameworks
- a commitment to strengthening anti-discrimination structures, e.g. for complaints centres in businesses
- exchanging views and cooperation between network members.

Advising. Strengthening. Coordinating.

The Network against Discrimination organises independent ranges of advice that can provide you with support and information in many situations in life.

So if you

- want to talk about discrimination, abuse and violation up to and including violence or
- need advice about possible legal and practical actions, then contact one of the ranges of advice listed.

Using the possible contacts and websites given here, you'll be able to find out which range of advice best fits you.

There is discrimination in all areas of life.

When looking for somewhere to live, in nightclubs, in the workplace, in the train, at school or at government agencies.

And the rights everyone has to comprehensive non-discrimination are just as extensive.

Because everyone has the right not to face discrimination for reasons of their ethnic origins, gender, religion or ideology, a disability, age or sexual identity.

We'll support you to assert these rights.

Use the advice and information possibilities in the Network against Discrimination.
