Whether at conferences, in front of an academic committee or promoting a research project: Holding presentations is one of the key skills that are frequently required of scientists in their professional life. Effective (self)presenting in the way of showing your strength and knowledge confidently and authentically at the right moment is an art – and a professional competence that can be learned.

In this workshop, you will learn about essential speech communication techniques and get the opportunity to practice speeches. You will be provided with insights into the use of positive language and the practise of successful self-expression.

Elements of this workshop will be:
- Rhetoric theory and input on speech structure
- Practice of clear and concise communication
- Body language, embodiment and status
- Practice of self-presenting, statements and speeches

The aim of the workshop is to equip you with tools and strategies that help promoting yourself and your scientific work with confidence and joy.

We offer a refund of expenses for childcare. Attention: The babysitter cannot be a member of the family!
