What are the Research Ambassadors?

- Aiming to promote worldwide the University of Bremen
- Since the summer of 2015
- Currently eleven research alumni
- They are from various departments and research areas, with a special focus on their geographic diversity.

What are the Research Ambassadors?

- To facilitate further cooperation between the Research Ambassadors and the University of Bremen, the University has different programs in place.
- These programs not only allow the Ambassadors to stay in touch with the University, but also to further promote promising young researchers.

What are the Research Ambassadors?

- By promoting its international alumni work, the University of Bremen aims to further internationalize and diversify its alumni network and to form stronger social and economic bonds in other countries.
- A long-term objective is to establish contacts in business enterprises in other countries, and to use these contacts to find cooperation partners abroad for joint projects.
